Exemplary royal luxuries
for rare pleasures of life

An aspiring way of living

A home should be an opening to a world full of beautiful experiences, not a confinement to four closed walls. We have thought a lot about what one wants out of a home. Of how, it can be even more. Here's a glimpse of what we have envisioned. Vaastu compliant layouts. Well laid out straight & clean cut floor plans, 3 Meters floor-to- ceiling glass windows for an incredible panoramic view and ample amount of natural light. At the core of the site stand a 22-storey residential building – balancing sunlight with natural shading, and the apartments are punctuated by greenery, which draws the surrounding greenery into the building. Each floor has two Ultra luxury condos and six luxury duplexes located from the 15th floor onwards, with a 180 degree view of our Bangalore City.

On Solid Ground

At the luxury end of the market, especially in tall buildings, keeping all engineering aspects in mind are just as important as architecture. For these new generation buildings reaching 250 feet in height and beyond, structural engineering is the back bone of the building and MEP (Mechanical, Electrical and Plumbing) engineering is the life blood to the building. Furthermore, in vertical transportation engineering to ensure efficient and timely transportation of the buildings occupants, and façade engineering to provide an attractive and energy efficient skin for the building is also of prime importance.

In HM Grandeur, the structural engineering is dominated by lateral loads caused by seismic activity and extreme wind load conditions. It is important to ensure structural safety against extreme wind loads as well as check the acceleration levels. Design wind loads and acceleration levels has been accessed accurately by development of advance wind tunnel testing, a technique that addresses the complex and dynamic interaction between wind and structure.

Fire and life safety considerations are also important for all luxury buildings. The Indian codes are prescriptive, strict and generally conservative. Code compliance along with right application of advance fire engineering techniques are sourced from the advanced fire and safety firms to ensure that HM Grandeur is very safe always.
